Documented ISO Public Protection Classification

ISO report created February 23, 2023
La Madera FPSA | Total credit: 55.18 points

La Madera Fire & Rescue, part of Sandoval County Fire & Rescue, District 4, Station 49, provides this statement to help residents document the community's fire-protection classification when speaking with their insurance provider.

The most recent completed ISO classification report located in the department's records is the February 23, 2023 Public Protection Classification Summary Report for La Madera FPSA. It records a final community classification of 05/10 and a total score of 55.18 points.

What the 5/10 classification means

The report describes Class 5 eligibility within five road miles of a recognized fire station under the applicable alternative water supply criteria, without a hydrant-distance requirement. It describes Class 10 for properties beyond five road miles, with a separate, property-specific Class 10W provision for qualifying locations within five to seven road miles.

The classification is not a blanket Class 5 designation for every address. Ask your insurance agent to verify the classification applied to your specific property, including road distance, recognized station coverage, water supply, and any individual property requirements.
